I'm so thankful to finally hear and learn... straighten out all of the things that confused me about Christianity. I went from a highly liberal non Christian to a conservative Christian/unhealthy patriarchal version, to learning the past three years a common sense way that the Bible doesn't cross itself. A place where the love of Jesus makes sense. Where His love is whole and wholistic.

Thank you, thank you for helping me come full circle to being able to FULLY be able to claim the love of Jesus in my life. I can see and feel that love now. It makes sense.

2026-01-27 12:21:15 From Tameika Green-Crane to Everyone:

That was a very interesting discussion. The intersection of sexual abuse, parafilia and the theology of what is acceptable in the bedroom is definitely an area that needs more research and discussion.

2026-01-27 12:21:25 From Dr. Jessica Evans to Everyone:

Clarification: Tabi referred to "breath play"

Breath play related to strangulation refers to a category of sexual activity in which airflow or blood flow to the brain is intentionally restricted to create sensations some people associate with heightened arousal. When strangulation is involved, it typically means external pressure is applied to the neck, affecting the airway, blood vessels (carotid arteries), or both.

Why this is especially dangerous

- The neck contains critical, fragile structures (airway, blood vessels, nerves).
- Loss of consciousness can occur suddenly, sometimes without warning signs.
- Injury can be delayed (stroke, brain injury, carotid artery damage, swelling of the airway hours later).
- Risk exists even without pain, marks, or prolonged pressure.
- Repeated incidents increase cumulative risk.

If you have experienced strangulation or physical abuse, I would highly suggest looking into Brazilian jiu-jitsu. Find a school that is trauma-informed. But it has proven to be therapeutic to learn ways in your physical body to protect yourself, especially from past ways that your body was abused previously to help you take back control of your body. I would be happy to help you find a safe school for this type of training.

Martial arts can be one method of healing for trauma. There are many others that we talk about in courses as well.

2026-01-27 12:26:29 From Dr. Jessica Evans to Everyone:

Replying to "Did anyone ask yet if this is considered rape?":

You can also read more about what "enthusiastic consent" means. Some people say yes but it's because they've been coerced or completely worn down. That is not true consent.

Enthusiastic consent means a clear, active, and freely given "yes" to sexual activity — not just the absence of a "no." Both people genuinely want to be there and are happy to participate.

2026-01-27 12:27:15 From Helenmary Brown to Everyone:

QUESTION: Is there an effective path and/or resources for getting free of pornographic addiction?

From Tabi: Healing from porn addiction is a multifaceted process. The exact path is dependent on the individual and high-quality treatment is essential. Good treatment should include addiction-focused and trauma-focused work by a specialist who understands it. Additionally, the addict must be willing to do the work. No treatment will be effective with someone who doesn't want to heal. This is, like many places, a spot to watch out for false repentance and pretty words.

Thanks for sharing that, Scott. It makes sense & is something I've heard as well, strangulation (as well as other dangerous & harmful events) often don't come up without direct questions. Sometimes asking about strangulation (or abuse) can be done by asking about the act or behaviors because the term doesn't connect as something they've experienced.

Replying to "Tabi is talking about the arousal template and how...":
What is the best treatment for this?

From Tabi- Untangling arousal templates is also a multifaceted process. It's best done with a trusted coach or therapist, but depending on the person's healing journey can also be done individually (like if they've had good therapy and some good skills). My book talks about this at length. It involves becoming aware of your arousal template and then inviting your body to something different over and over again. Like many things the exact process is individual to the person.

So many aspects of healing don't have "check boxes." There are some general principles, like self-compassion, crying out to Jesus, becoming aware, but the exact path is unique to each person.

Is it normal for the victim to use these same tactics to keep herself and her children safe? Also, so that I could look back on the tape when he would gaslight me and rewatch to prove to myself that he actually did push our son down even though he said he didn't. (Granted, he did unplug them a few times..) My husband was buying street drugs. I put an airtag in my baby's seat in case he were to take our baby. Yes, this is often weaponized against victims.

Exactly the verse my Dad used to not apologize for his verbal/emotional/spiritual abuse.

Yep, it's definitely one way that verse gets misapplied. Is it challenging to hear it now?

I would like to know what that scripture means in light of victims needing to gather evidence to protects themselves against the abuser. "Keeps no record of wrong" is severely weaponized in the churches I used to be part of.

Joy says: I don't think I have anything in writing, but I do address it at the protect the flocks. It simply means it doesn't keep a record of wrongs in order to control or hurt someone. When somebody is keeping a record to protect themselves, it is a different thing. I talk about how women can't get protective orders and so forth if they aren't able to document. So I mostly talk about how it doesn't refer to documentation.
